5 THINGS TO KNOW

WELCOME TO METRO BOSTON

MATT BURKE, SPORTS EDITOR

The buzz around town these days always seems to be centered around Tom Brady, or Kyrie Irving, or Jayson Tatum, Bill Belichick and even LeBron James. But with the NFL and NBA finally on the backburner, Boston will collectively turn its eyes to the boys down at Fenway. Leading the charge for the Sox this season has been newcomer JD Martinez, who could be the best pure hitter the franchise has seen since (blasphemy and Big Papi lovers be damned) Ted Williams. Martinez is set to own the rest of this summer, and if all goes as planned — he could own autumn as well.

8 BOYS RESCUED FROM FLOODED THAI CAVES

1 Eight of the 12 boys trapped with their soccer coach in a labyrinthine flooded cave complex in northern Thailand have been freed, authorities said on Monday, adding that the time for rescuing the others will depend on the weather. The mission which started Sunday is a race against the clock with heavy rain expected this week which would again flood the tunnels with fast-flowing, rising water. A crack team of foreign divers and Thai Navy SEALS guided four boys on Sunday and a further four on Monday through narrow, submerged channels from the muddy bank deep inside the Tham Luang cave where they had been stranded for more than two weeks. "All four boys have arrived at hospital, all are safe," Narongsak Osottanakorn, head of the rescue mission, told reporters of those freed on Monday. Asked whether the remaining four "Wild Boars" team and their coach would come out at the same time in the next rescue effort, he said: "It depends on the plan. ... We have set the plan for four people so if they want to take five out [at the same time], then they need to change the plan."

STUDENTS, ACTIVISTS TO PROTEST NORTHEASTERN

2 Northeastern University is facing backlash from students, alumni and community members because of its $7.8 million research contract with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, also known as ICE. Student organizers plan a protest at the university on Wednesday, after 2,000 people signed an online petition asking the university to cut all ties with the agency. The protest will begin at noon on the university's campus, on Krentzman Quadrangle. About 200 are expected to attend. On June 30, thousands marched on Boston Common to protest the separation of families crossing the border from Mexico to the United States, a policy that the Trump administration says it has reversed with an executive order, and to call for the abolition of ICE. The professor conducting research with the funds, Glenn Pierce, told the News Service his work analyzes data on "dual-use technologies" that are exported from the United States. The technologies are products that could be used for common tasks, like machine repair, but can double as parts in the construction of a weapon.

CROATIA SACKS VUKOJEVIC OVER UKRAINE MESSAGE

4 Croatia's Football Federation (HNS) sacked Ognjen Vukojevic, a member of the national team's coaching staff, over a "glory to Ukraine" video posted after Croatia beat Russia in the World Cup quarter-finals, HNS said in a statement on Monday. Vukojevic and Croatia defender Domagoj Vida published the video on social media after the match on Saturday in a move which was criticized by Russian politicians and led to a warning from FIFA's disciplinary committee. Relations between Ukraine and World Cup hosts Russia remain fraught after the latter's 2014 annexation of the Crimean peninsula and its backing for a pro-Russian uprising in the east of the country. HNS said it had revoked Vukojevic's accreditation at the World Cup and relieved him of his duties as an observer for the Croatia squad. "HNS hereby apologizes to the Russian public for the actions of a member of the Croatian delegation," it said. HNS said Vukojevic and Vida apologized for their statements, saying they were not intended to be political messages but "unfortunately left room for such interpretations."

TRUMP'S LONGTIME DRIVER SUES FOR BACK WAGES

5 A New York man who said he was Donald Trump's personal driver for more than 20 years sued the president's company on Monday, claiming he was not paid for thousands of hours of overtime. Noel Cintron, 59, said the Trump Organization has not paid him for 3,300 hours of overtime in the last six years or given him a "meaningful" raise for 12 years. The Trump Organization said Cintron was paid fairly. Cintron is seeking damages that his lawyer said could reach $400,000, including punitive damages and sums for federal and state labor law violations. The unpaid overtime alone totaled more than $178,000, at $54.09 per hour, and could have been higher but for a statute of limitations, the complaint said. "In an utterly callous display of unwarranted privilege and entitlement and without even a minimal sense of noblesse oblige President Donald Trump has, through the defendant entities, exploited and denied significant wages to his own longstanding personal driver," the complaint said. The Trump Organization disagreed. "Mr. Cintron was at all times paid generously and in accordance with the law," a rep said in an email.

Convicted child rapist Wayne Chapman pleads not guilty to new lewdness charges

Chapman allegedly exposed himself and masturbated in front of corrections staff.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Child rapist Wayne Chapman pleaded not guilty on Monday to new charges of lewd acts stemming from two incidents inside the Massachusetts Correctional Institute, Shirley.

Chapman, 70, has been serving time at that facility since 1977 after he was convicted of raping two boys.

He was set to be released after 30 years, but that release was postponed due to his latest arrest. Officials say that Chapman exposed himself to and masturbated in front the staff of nurses at Shirley from inside his cell on June 3 and 4.

Chapman pleaded not guilty to the new charges in Middlesex Superior Court on Monday.

Assistant District Attorney Emily Jackson requested that Chapman be held pending a dangerousness hearing, the Boston Globe reported, since the alleged actions involved a "substantial risk of physical force against another person."

Chapman's proposed release sparked outrage from Gov. Charlie Baker and others who feel that serial sex offenders should see harsher penalties, like life in prison without the option of parole.

"She believed that his actions were deliberate and she felt violated and disgusted by his behavior."

The Shirley employees

Court filings show that Chapman previously admitted to molesting as many as 100 boys. Chapman petitioned for review this year and was deemed no longer a sexual danger by two psychologists before the lewd incidents occurred inside Shirley.

One of the Shirley employees who witnessed Chapman masturbating said that "she believed that his actions were deliberate and she felt violated and disgusted by his behavior," according to a court filing obtained by the Globe.

Chapman is continued to be held without bail. His arraignment will continue Wednesday. during which the prosecution will push again for a dangerousness hearing.

Belgium, France square off in World Cup semis

Belgium will meet France in World Cup play for the third time ever. This time though, it's for a place in the 2018 FIFA World Cup Final on Sunday in Moscow. GETTY IMAGES

The first of two all-European semifinals at the 2018 FIFA World Cup kicks off this morning as Belgium's "golden generation" meets France for a spot in the largest soccer match on the planet.

This is one step further than both sides took at the previous World Cup in 2014. In Brazil, Belgium lost to Lionel Messi and Argentina in the quarterfinals while France bowed out to Germany at the same stage.

In what is considered to be the best team Belgium has ever fielded with premier talents like Eden Hazard, Kevin De Bruyne and Romelo Lukaku, the Red Devils are playing in their second-ever semifinal at a World Cup. The first came in 1986 when they lost to eventual champions Argentina.

Belgium has already beaten some notable world powers during its journey to the last four. A 2-1 win over Brazil in the quarterfinals was almost pedestrian compared to the thrilling 3-2 victory over Japan in the Round of 16 when it came back from two goals down in the second half. A 1-0 victory over fellow semifinalists England secured Group G for the Belgians.

The Red Devils are paced by the attacking brilliance of Eden Hazard, who spearheads Belgium's attack thanks to his ability to create space out of nothing and hold possession better than almost any player in the world.

While he has two goals at this year's tournament, his and De Bruyne's distribution abilities have put Lukaku in the conversation for the World Cup's Golden Boot. The striker is tied for second with four goals behind England's Harry Kane.

Some of the credit for Lukaku's efficiency in front of goal in Russia could be attributed to assistant coach Thierry Henry, who was one of the most prolific strikers in the world during his time on the pitch from 1994-2012.

But the 40-year-old coach will have split allegiances today as he applied his trade as a player with his home nation of France. Henry is the country's all-time leading goal scorer with 51 tallies while helping his home nation lift the 1998 World Cup and make another final in 2006.

"He is a huge player and a great gentleman of French football," France goalkeeper Hugo Lloris said on Monday. "It is a bit peculiar to see him with the Belgium team but that is his career and that is how he is learning his future career. I think his heart will be split tomorrow because, before anything, he remains French."

France has only that 1998 title in its World Cup trophy case. Since then, it's been a rocky and inconsistent ride for Les Bleus. In the previous four tournaments, France crashed out of the group stage in 2002 and 2010 before heartbreak in the 2006 final against Italy and 2014 quarterfinals. But Didier Deschamps' fresh, new-look side has provided a resurgence in French soccer as this squad is the youngest remaining group in the tournament with an average age of 26.

The poster child for the youth movement has been 19-year-old striker Kylian Mbappe, who had a coming out party of sorts against Argentina after recording two goals and setting up a third by drawing a penalty in a 4-3 victory.

Both he and Antoine Griezmann have three goals in Russia, providing 75 percent of France's goals this tournament. Benjamin Pavard and Raphael Varane are the only other Frenchmen with goals at the World Cup this year.

That victory over Messi and company was the first legitimate sign that France could be a real threat at the World Cup. Les Bleus looked less than convincing in the Group Stage with narrow, one-goal victories over Australia and Peru before a goalless draw against Denmark.

Now it faces a Belgium side for a third time at the World Cup. If history suggests anything though, France is in good shape as it came away with wins in the 1938 group stage and 1986 in the third-place game. JOE PANTORNO

Micro-weddings: The freedom of choosing how to get married

Say bye-bye to lavish weddings and hello to intimate ones.

LUZ LANCHEROS
MWN
letters@metro.us

In life, everything costs: being born, dying and even getting married. In fact, to live happily ever after in the U.S., on average, people invest more than $32,000, according to TheKnot.com, which researched 13,000 events nationwide.

The wedding-planning business represented, in 2016 alone, $72 trillion in profits, according to a report from consultancy IBISWorld. The dress, cake, DJ, photographer, food, hair, makeup, decoration — a universe exquisitely planned for the likes of those tying the knot. And prices go accordingly, not counting the immense stress that exists when planning an event for others to enjoy.

But now, lots of people are saying: enough. Not only because people fewer people are getting married—younger generations are choosing to postpone their wedding to live together as a couple—but people have less money, especially with a generation more committed and focused on the experience. In fact, IBISWorld shows that revenues for wedding planners will fall by 2021. But there is also opportunity for niche businesses and adaptations like "micro-weddings": small and personalized ceremonies. In the sharing-economy era, DIY weddings focus on experiences like getting married in a forest or doing your own catering. On Pinterest you can find ideas and inspiration and ideas for everything, from invitations to renting a dress. Decorations can be bought on Etsy, and if you feel like getting married like Darth Vader, it's just a click away. Weddings, after all, accommodate the taste of its brides and grooms.

"There are all kinds of factors, although weddings with lots of guests still prevail, I would say that there are two types of situations: the couple who decides to do an intimate and small wedding, and those who after doing a small ceremony still want a party with lots of people. For this to happen, factors such as budgets or the desire to invest the cost of the wedding in a more 'experiential' honeymoon, or people that just don't want to get involved in a party and what it implies, or simply because they do not like the formalism that an event like a wedding implies, because however relaxed it is, it still has certain protocols," explains wedding planner Julián Posada.

He adds that "small"

You don't need to break the bank for your wedding day.

Get married for free today thanks to Lifetime

Weddings can be expensive. Good news: if you're looking to tie the knot, you can do it for free today in seven U.S. cities. All you need to do is show up at the courthouse.

The Lifetime TV channel is covering courthouse weddings all day at various locations in New York City, Boston, Los Angeles, Chicago, Miami, Atlanta and Dallas, up to 70 in each city, in celebration of the debut of the seventh season of "Married at First Sight" at 9 p.m. on Tuesday night. If you're in the Big Apple, head down to the City Clerk's Office at 141 Worth Street anytime from 8:30 a.m. to 3:45 p.m. to get hitched for free. In Boston, join the festivities at 1 City Hall Square from 9 a.m. through 4 p.m.

In "Married at First Sight," a panel of counselors and experts including psychologist Dr. Jessica Griffin, sociologist Dr. Pepper Schwartz and marriage counselor and Pastor Calvin Roberson, bring together couples they believe are compatible. Couples will meet for the first time at the altar. Follow the couples throughout the season as they begin their lives together, leading up to an ultimate decision to stay together or file for divorce. The seventh season will take place in Dallas, Texas, and follow three new relationships.

"We're thrilled to celebrate the Married at First Sight season seven premiere with a tribute to love in these seven cities," Gena McCarthy, executive vice president and head of programming for Lifetime Unscripted said in a release. "'Married at First Sight' has been a part of countless couples' journeys to falling to love and we couldn't think of a more fun way to celebrate this lucky seventh season!"

"Couples in general want to find places that tell them a story, places where they can build a narrative and credible experiences."

Julián Posada, wedding planner

is a relative term. "We should define what we mean by small. For example, there are weddings for 20 people, in which only family members, godparents and intimate friends attend. There are also weddings for 80 or 100 people, if the families and friends are a little more numerous, today protocols do not necessarily dictate the size of a celebration; rather, they are dictated by the character of the couple and their lifestyle, from there they select the venue, the ambience, food, music and the decoration."

However, Posada indicates there is a tendency to make things less traditional and closer to nature. Beaches and outdoor landscapes have displaced the chapel and the courthouse, because the intention is to make of the event something memorable, especially for those who are getting hitched. Forests, farms and greenery are what's trending.

"Today there is a huge desire to get married in the outdoors and for the wedding to be more bohemian — at least for the couples who are working with me — people are tending to strip the event of excesses of formality and come closer to real life," he emphasizes. "Couples in general want to find places that tell them a story, places where they can build a narrative and credible experiences."

Whether you go big or decide on something more intimate, everything today is valid. The important thing is not to throw a party so others can eat and criticize, but for everyone to be able to enjoy the moment and create a great memory.

JD Martinez, right, has powered the Red Sox to the best record in baseball. GETTY IMAGES

Martinez, the King of hitting

JD Martinez is a legit Triple Crown threat in the American League this season.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

For all this talk of baseball being dead the past few days, the Red Sox – and namely JD Martinez – have their chance to own this town starting now. The Celtics' hot stove is dying down, and the Patriots won't play a real football game until after Labor Day. We're now knee deep in summer, and it's finally the Sox' time to shine. A few barnburner wins over the Yankees, and a few more Martinez jacks should do the trick.

Yeah, Martinez hasn't been fully embraced by the Boston faithful just yet, but if this current hitting magic continues into October then he will most certainly be knighted.

Martinez's first year with the Sox has been remarkable, as he is legitimately a contender to win the Triple Crown (leading the league in home runs, RBIs and batting average).

Winning the Triple Crown in baseball is sasquatch-rare, as Detroit's Miguel Cabrera has been the only MLB player to accomplish the feat in the past 50 years. Before Cabrera broke the dry spell in 2012, the Red Sox' own Carl Yastrzemski was the last player to do so – in 1967. Since RBIs became an official stat in 1920, only 12 baseball players have done the deed.

Martinez is currently leading the American League in home runs with 27, and in RBIs with 74. It's looking like he's going to run away with the RBI title as he is 12 RBIs ahead of No. 2 on the list – Edwin Encarnacion of the Cleveland Indians with 62. Martinez is currently two up on Mike Trout in homers.

The one Triple Crown category where Martinez does not lead right now is batting average, as teammate Mookie Betts is the class of the AL there – hitting at a .342 clip. Martinez is currently fourth on that list with a .329 average, but was hitting above .340 as recently as May 22. Betts has never hit better than .318 over the course of a season, so it's entirely possible that he and several other contenders will drop.

Either way, Martinez and Betts have a nice little friendly rivalry going.

"You always see [Betts] on the top step in the dugout every time I come in," Martinez told MassLive earlier this season. "We're just kind of laughing, talking smack with each other and stuff like that. We have a good relationship."

Martinez, who was recently called "the best hitter in baseball" by MLB Hall of Famer Frank Thomas, has an evolving mind for hitting that has affected this year's Red Sox team monumentally. Martinez has helped Betts with his swing, as well as several other players on the Sox - including Rafael Devers who was enduring a hitting slump earlier this year.

"Devers actually had a great weekend of work in the cage," Red Sox manager Alex Cora said in early June (via CNHI). "A few things JD noticed and threw it out there to him."

Lo and behold, in the remaining 18 games played by the Red Sox that month – Devers went on a tear and collected 23 hits.

The Triple Crown is all about individual statistical achievement and is very much a selfish award. But if Betts comes out the winner in batting average at Martinez's expense, don't expect No. 28 to put up much of a stink.

Velazquez likely to start for Sox tonight

Hector Velazquez is likely to get the start on the mound for the Sox tonight as they once again play Texas at Fenway (7 p.m., NESN). Velazquez has primarily thrived in relief duty this season as he has a 6-0 record with a 2.76 ERA. The Rangers will counter with veteran hurler Yovani Gollardo, who is having a brutal year with an 8.17 ERA.).

Aries Physical and mental challenges will motivate you to step up and take a leadership position. Your ability to outmaneuver rivals and your undying stamina will be hard to beat.

Taurus Don't feel you must make a snap decision just because someone else does. Dig deep and find out exactly what's entailed before you make a commitment. Better to be safe than sorry.

Gemini An emotional incident can ruin your day. Try to be patient with loved ones who depend on you for assistance. Delegate jobs if you are running out of time.

Cancer Get out and do things that inspire you to get going with a creative project. Someone you encounter will make an impression that will affect the way you move forward.

Leo Do your best to pitch in and help. The difference you make will influence the way others treat you. A partnership will spark your interest. Don't bite off more than you can chew.

Virgo Size up a situation that could cause a work-related problem for you and make some adjustments. Your insight will ward off a setback. Personal improvements will help stabilize your life.

Libra Spread a little joy to lift your spirits. Taking short trips, visiting old friends or learning something new will encourage personal growth.

Scorpio Keep things moving forward by not taking on too much or letting things overwhelm you. You are best off taking care of what's necessary and giving yourself time to rejuvenate.

Sagittarius Don't let your storytelling get you into a fix with someone you include in your version of events. A physical challenge should be handled with caution.

Capricorn If you want something, you must be willing to do the work yourself. The satisfaction you get digging in and accomplishing what you set out to do will boost your confidence.

Aquarius Don't give in to someone putting pressure on you. Set the record straight by making it clear what you will and won't do. Counter with something practical.

Pisces Check your emotions at the door when getting together with relatives or peers who don't always share your opinions. Listen, but don't feel obliged to share your point of view. EUGENIA LAST
